

ABSTRACT

A mobile station, a telecommunications method, and a telecommunications system employing a MT-TA Interface description capable of dealing with a handover between different wireless communications methods. When a wireless channel control part receives a handover request from a corresponding mobile network, the wireless channel control part communicates with a corresponding mobile network to complete a handover procedure on a wireless channel, and a common adaptor part switches to a communication with the wireless channel control part.